

ABSTRACT

Systems and techniques are disclosed relating to communications. The systems and techniques include determining the temperature and process speed of chips used in communications devices. The systems and techniques include measuring the output of ring oscillators embedded in the chips, and calculating the temperature and process speed therefrom.